CITY LOCALS

The Erson orchestra will give a dance at the St. John hotel Thursday evening at 10 o'clock. Everybody is invited to attend. A special music program has been arranged.

B. I. Hazzard of Georgetown, S. C. has purchased an interest in S. Maxwell & Co., and will be identified with the business. Mr. Hazzard has had 17 years experience in the grocery business.

Rowe & Zimmerman announce a mailing order department in connection with their growing book and stationery trade. They will shortly issue handsome catalogues to the patrons.

The Spring number of the Mountaineer has been issued from the presses of the The Mutual Printing company. The edition published by the Literary societies of the graded school show a liberal support of advertising from the local merchants.

Ralph A. Jones of the Hoosier Manufacturing company of New Castle, Ind., is conducting the Hoosier kitchen cabinet sale for the Hendersonville Furniture company. He has been busy this week lecturing to the ladies of Hendersonville and Henderson county the economy and time saving of this company's product.

Material has been ordered for the new Community club building to be erected near the Carnegie library. The foundation and basement partitions will be constructed in Natco hollow tiling which is on the way here. The plans and specifications have been accepted and work will begin immediately after the material is placed upon the ground.

Dr. W. H. Justus has received information from the secretary of the State Druggist association that the program is being prepared for the meeting which will be held in this city in June. Very handsome badges have been ordered by the local druggists. Dr. Justus attended the Rexall druggists meeting held in Raleigh and from expressions made by the various druggists of this organization indications point to one of the largest gatherings to be held in this city in the history of the association. Many of the druggists will be accompanied by their wives.

The Confederate Veterans have surely had the time of their lives at the reunion in Jacksonville the past week. A large number of their sons and daughters took advantage of the reduced rates and joined in the celebration, hundreds going from North Carolina. That will be the last reunion many of the old patriots will experience in this old world, for the lines are thinning rapidly and ere long the last one of them will have passed from the scenes of earth and the forces of loved ones. But their deed of daring at a time which tried men's souls will never fade from the memories of generations yet unknown.

MURPHY RAILROAD TALK. L. & N. Railway Will Probably Take Over Hiwassee River Railway. (Cherokee Scout.)

Mr. W. L. Maypoth, first vice president of the Louisville & Nashville Railway, arrived in Murphy last Thursday night to meet a delegation of citizens from Hiwassee, Ga., Hayesville, Murphy, and Andrews, N. C., for the purpose of talking over the proposition of the L. & N. taking over the Hiwassee River Railway, a notice of which conference appeared in the last issue of the Scout.

The proposition of the L. & N. Railway taking over the Hiwassee River Railway was thoroughly discussed and the matter gone into by both sides. Vice President Maypoth made a proposition that was acceptable to the delegation. And the project for the early completion and actual work on the railroad begins to look a sure thing and much enthusiasm prevails in this section. There is every probability that the railroad that will open the rich county of Clay to the commercial world with modern railway facilities and develop one of the finest sections in Western North Carolina.

Mr Gudgers Record

(Waynesville Courier.)

Mr. James M. Gudger, Jr., is now completing his second term as representative in congress from the Tenth district and is offering himself again for the democratic nomination. Two years ago when he had opposition he asked for another term on the ground that he had served but one term and was due another nomination as an endorsement from his party. This year he cannot use the same argument, but must stand forth before the democratic voters of the district upon the record he has made during the four years.

When we examine what Mr. Gudger has done in congress there is little that we can find about him. In the past few days he has introduced bills appropriating $20,000 for improving the French Broad river between Brevard and Asheville and a bill amending the Civil Service law, neither of which have the slightest chance of being enacted, as Mr. Gudger very well knows. The remaining time of the present session is already allotted to the passing of the big appropriations and the trust bills recommended by the President. Previous to this last burst of energy on Mr. Gudger's part there is only one outstanding act of his upon the record.

This one thing was the vote cast by Mr. Gudger for the Sherwood Pension bill which increased the amount paid by the United States government to veterans of the Union army of the civil war by upwards of fifty million dollars each year. Alone of the ten congressmen from North Carolina Mr. Gudger voted for this bill which was denounced by thinking people the country over as an unjustified raid upon the national treasury.

In that great war of nearly half a century ago North Carolina played a leading part. Her soldiers were first at Bethel, furthest into the Union lines at Missionary Ridge and Gettysburg, and last at Appomattox. Over the battlefields of Virginia, North Carolinians were left dead by thousands, men laid down their lives, a sacrifice for a principle they believed right. "God bless North Carolina," was the remark made by General Robert E. Lee as he watched the ragged regiments of this state make the last charge of his army at Appomattox.

Back from those battlefields upon which they had done their utmost came those who had escaped the Federal bullets and the untold hardships of camp and prison. To homes laid waste by war, impoverished in purse and often broken in health, they came. The victories of war denied them, but their spirits unbroken. Those veterans asked no odds of any man; they claimed no right other than of being allowed to build again a state which was well nigh destroyed. To the veterans of the other side there went the acclaim of the victorious North, and soon to them also came a steady stream of gold from the national treasury, pensions to the victors.

The Confederate veterans realized that this was but natural, in fact the just thing. Against pensions to worthy men of the Union army there have been no words of protest from those who fought against them, though the people of the South have had to pay heavily in taxes to supply those pensions. It has only been since the floodgates of the treasury have been opened to deserving and unworthy alike that a protest has arisen.

With an extravagance unheard of the Sherwood pension bill gives Union veterans a dollar a day pension, and this without restriction as to whether the recipient is in need or not, and it goes farther and makes it easy for those who did not even see fighting, but merely in some manner had their names on the roll of the Union armies, to also receive pensions. Fifty million dollars and more was thus voted, and this must each year come from the pockets of the people of all sections, raised by taxation.

As we have said, the only congressman from North Carolina to vote for this lavish increase in the pension fund was Mr. Gudger. In this district, which he is supposed to represent, there are more than ten thousand Confederate veterans. These have never asked for anything for themselves. They are willing to see justice done to the veterans who opposed them long ago. The bitterness of war has passed, but we do not believe these old men will approve the action of their congressman in this matter, nor will the sons and kinsmen of the veterans.

During years of service, aside from drawing a salary of $7,500 each year, Mr. Gudger has done nothing but this one thing, an act that has brought the blush of shame to many, and a flush of anger to still more. Upon this record Mr. Gudger asks that he be returned to Congress for another two years.

Reverberating through the mountains the answer comes in swelling chorus, "No." Mr. Gudger has been weighed and found wanting. adv 1t

TRADE IN HENDERSONVILLE

It matters not how small a town is now-a-days,
You may buy absolutely anything you wish

Read This

Do you remember in the story of the "Arabian Nights" about the man who could rub the old brass lamp, make a wish, and anything he desired he got? That was only a STORY.

This is a Fact
